After meeting him this past Saturday afternoon andn reading his book I phoned former HMG J.Edward Day at his law office when in DC yesterday. Ernie had introduced us as writers, and the conversation had turned to the Geese For Peace project and the humorous aspects of geese when Delaplaine arrived at the book store.

I told Day when I phoned that I had written a book that had been praised by a number of publishers who hadm indicated fear of the govt as reason for not publishing it. Told him subject matter, etc., and that I wasn't looking f for help in publication. He first seemed to thing, why I dont know, that I sought editorial help (he was only good at light stuff, he indicated). I finally got him to understand my only interest was in seeking his opinion about an approach to the family. He was, despite his having served under JFK and his protestations of respect, etc., totally disinterested. He knew nothing about family.
